Like a kabab from a street side vender over doneBy Paul Gale.Jesse has some good and thought provoking ideas, there is a bit of history involved to understand the issues and places. Jesse has obviously done his homework well and accurately reported his expolits. It was on OK read, but the strong language and overly descriptive explanations became a bit of a turn off, it was almost like Jesse was trying to get the reader to be polarised on the issue discussed, but I really think Jesse was just trying to be controversial. I think Jesse is best suited for magazine journalism. The biggest let down was all those quotes and crap at the top of each chapter, but you dont have to read them.1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Surfing in "Rocket Country"By Mel B.Wow! What a fun but sometimes hair raising journey through the Middle East this book turned out to be. Loved every paragraph, every sentence, every word! Most of all, I really appreciate what I now know but did not know before about the Middle East. Thank-you Jesse for including all those easy to read maps, a great help as I mentally traveled through each city and town being described. This book should be required reading for every student. A definite must read for adults as well.Great stuff, Jesse Aizenstat! What have you got up your sleeve for your
