Nestled in the rolling hills of central Kentucky, just outside the sleepy little town of Loretto, lies the Maker's Mark distillery. Already declared a National Historic Landmark, it is also considered by many bourbon lovers as the Mecca of Fine Bourbon. Thousands of visitors make the trek to Loretto each year to tour this historic place, see the distilling process first hand and enjoy the scenic grounds. The vision of this book, The Ambassador of Bourbon: Maker's Mark and the Rebirth of America's Native Spirit, was to visually capture the distillery grounds at every season of the year and every time of day. This book conveys, through photographs, the history, the heritage and that special something that makes Maker's Mark, well... Maker's Mark! Photographer David Toczko tells the story of what sets Maker's apart from other bourbons, and takes the reader on a visual tour of the distillery. The beautiful photographs will hopefully entice those who have never been to Loretto to come and experience this special place for themselves. For those who have already taken the walking tour, this book will serve as a source of reflection and fond remembrance of their visit. With over 10,000 photographs shot at the distillery, Mr. Toczko presents his favorite 250+ images, including several historic shots from the Samuels family archives, that demonstrate why Maker's Mark truly is The Ambassador of Bourbon. Enjoy!

"Maker's Mark is a benchmark bourbon, and this book invokes the beauty of the whisky, and the love and care that goes into each and every bottle. The Samuels family has fought for generations to retain the integrity of their whisky. You can taste their passion in the glass." --Gaz Regan Co-author of The Book of Bourbon and Other Fine American Whiskeys"I love Maker's Mark! And the pictures in the book just make me want to have a Maker's on the rocks right now." --Andy Cohen Bravo's Watch What Happens Live"David Toczko has done it again! On the heels of his wonderful photographic tribute to Kentucky's Shaker Village of Pleasant Hill, he has created a superb collection of images that brings to life yet another of the Bluegrass State's historic landmarks, the Maker's Mark Distillery. From the making of whisky barrels to the dipping of bottles of Maker's Mark in the signature red wax, Toczko's vibrant photos take the observer through the whisky-making processes perfected by eight generations of the Samuels family and provide a meticulous look at the charming buildings and picturesque grounds that welcome all who come to visit." --John Snell Photographer; Author of *Red River Gorge, The Eloquent Landscape*About the AuthorDavid Toczko is a long-time Kentucky resident and a Western Kentucky University graduate. His interest in photography began in 1985 and has grown from a passionate hobby to a career as a freelance, commercial photographer. His work is internationally published and has been acclaimed for its richness and depth of color, texture and clarity. His artistic vision is to create photographs with both visual and emotional impact. Recent efforts are focused in his signature style of low light/natural light, which adds a dimension not always found in the studio. His first book, Shaker Village of Pleasant Hill: 50th Anniversary of the Restoration, was published in 2010 by Acclaim Press and received an ADDY Award for its design. A Maker's Mark Ambassador since 2009, David received his inspiration for this book during a visit to the distillery. He has returned many times since then, not only to photograph, but also to share this wonderful place with friends and family.
